11:15 A.M. - 11:45 | CARING FOR OLDER ELEPHANTS IN A SANCTUARY SETTING:

A VETERINARIAN'S PERSPECTIVE

Jackie Gai, DVM, PAWS

*It had to begin
with elephants.
I was born in love with all elephants: not
for a reason
that I know,
not because of any of their individual
qualities
— wisdom,
kindness,
power, grace,
patience,
loyalty — but
for what they are altogether,
for their entire elephantness.

*Elephants
bring out a fury in many men as no
other creature
does: a rage
to dominate
and to hurt.

*It should be clearly understood
that no
captive
situation can ever replace
the wild for
an elephant;
captivity will always pose innumerable problems
for elephant
keepers and handlers.

*I can't say
they don't
love them,
those people
I meet
who have
monkeys
in their
bedrooms,
wolves
in the backyard,
full-grown
lions in the garage.
Their eyes
fill with tears as they tell me how much their pets mean
to them,
and I don't think they're
lying. But I
no longer believe that the word love
excuses
stupidity
in the
slightest, or
that it alters
the fact that the animal
is always,
most always around as a projection of its owner's ego.

PAWS 2014 INTERNATIONAL CAPTIVE WILDLIFE CONFERENCE DAY 2 CONTINUED

Even the wisest of us think we're special. We may not believe in souls and afterlives much anymore, but we do still believe that we are the only creatures who can hurt inside. I tell you that it is not true.*

*Wild animals are not meant to be owned,
any more than human beings are.
No one has
the right to pass a
cougar or a gorilla from hand to hand, not for the purest
of motives.
All I can say
in honesty
is that I learned slowly, and only by doing all
the possible
wrong things first.

Program Subject To Change | Updated 10/23/2014

A selection of quotes from "The Lady and Her Tiger" by Pat Derby.*

*A wild animal is what it is,
and knows
what it
knows.
They trained
me to understand that.
