Statement by Entertainment Industry Professionals in Support of SB 1062 (elephant protection)

June 14, 2016

We, the undersigned entertainment industry professionals urge California to enact Senate Bill 1062, a bill by Senator Ricardo Lara to prohibit use of the bullhook on elephants. We agree that the bullhook is an outdated and inhumane device that unnecessarily subjects elephants to fear and pain and that it has no place in the great state of California. There is no excuse for treating elephants cruelly for entertainment’s sake.

We strongly agree with the following facts that support passage of this bill:

Elephants need to be protected from the bullhook. The bullhook is an archaic weapon designed to inflict pain on these highly intelligent and sensitive animals. Beginning when elephants are very young, handlers jab, hook and strike them with the bullhook to teach them to fear the device. From then on, the bullhook is a powerful reminder of the painful punishment that follows if an elephant so much as misses a cue, doesn’t move fast enough, or steps out of line.

Modern elephant training methods exist that are safer and more humane for elephants and humans alike. Today, zoos accredited by the Association of Zoos and Aquariums and bona fide sanctuaries in California use positive reinforcement and food rewards to train elephants, while providing excellent care. None of them use the bullhook.

The bullhook is used behind the scenes to train and punish elephants. The worst abuses take place away from the view of the public and law enforcement. The only sure way to protect elephants is to prohibit use of the bullhook.

The times are changing when it comes to the use and treatment of elephants in entertainment. The cities of Los Angeles - the entertainment capital of the world - and Oakland have prohibited the bullhook, and San Francisco has banned all performing wild animal acts. More than 40 municipalities across the U.S. have similar restrictions. The Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus no longer uses elephant acts. We don’t need to abuse elephants with bullhooks to entertain the world.

California must ensure the humane treatment of elephants by enacting SB 1062 and prohibiting use of the bullhook.
